INSTRUCTIONS

Roles and responsibilities in practical training

All parties agree to work together to reach the objectives specified for this practical training period. The student must follow the policies and procedures of the workplace and pursue his or her individual learning objectives. To achieve this, the student will assess and report on his or her learning and progress during the practical training period or development project.

The workplace supervisor provides induction to the job. The workplace supervisor also guides and evaluates the student's learning during the practical training period or development project.

The supervising teacher guides the student in applying the information and skills obtained in education into practice. The supervising teacher also supervises any research and reporting that may occur as part of the training. Supervision and evaluation are a continuous process.

All parties must respect and ensure the confidentiality of customer information, workplace or business information and any other information that is indicated to be confidential.

Should the practical training period not progress according to the agreed plan or if there is risk that the student may fail the practical training period, the workplace supervisor must contact Diak's supervising teacher without delay.

Further instructions on the assessment of practical training periods are available at diak.fi/en/?s=placement

Overall assessment of practical training

In order to track the student's learning on the job, the practical training periods include assessment discussions. These are attended by the student, the workplace representative, other possible members of the workplace community or peer assessors, and the supervising teacher. The discussions can take place in person, over the phone or on a virtual meeting platform. Assessment is both formative and summative.

The overall assessment of each practical training period is based on the student's individual learning objectives, the objectives specified in the curriculum, and on the general competences required by the profession in relation to the practical training period in question and the workplace.

At the end of each practical training period, the student, the workplace supervisor and Diak's supervising teacher will hold an assessment discussion to go through the objectives set for the period in question and their attainment. The result of this discussion is an assessment of the progress in the student's professional skills and strengths as well as areas with development needs.
